

According to JAXA data, the Arctic Sea's ice extent is presently the fourth-lowest on record.

- Roughly 300,000 km² less than the mean for 2010.
- About 1,350,000 km² less than the mean for the 2000s.
- About 2,420,000 km² less than the mean for the 1990s.
- About 3,070,000 km² less than the mean for the 1980s.