

High temperatures are expected to remain in regions of western Croatia along the Adriatic coast until at least August 30. The high temperatures may fuel an upsurge in wildfire activity throughout the region, posing a health risk to the public.